LECCE

Vs

HELLAS VERONA

Hellas Verona are undefeated in their last eight matches played against Lecce in Serie A (5W, 3D): indeed, this represents one of their two longest current unbeaten streaks against an opponent in the top-flight (8 also against Cagliari).

After a run of three consecutive wins against Hellas Verona between Serie A and B, Lecce haven't won any of the last five league games against them (1D, 4L); they also failed to score in four of those five matches (just two goals scored, in the 2-2 earlier this season).

Hellas Verona have won their last two Serie A away matches against Lecce, after not winning any of the previous six (2D, 4L); they could find record three consecutive away victories against a single opponent for just the second time in the competition, after doing so against Pisa between 1982 and 1985.

Lecce have conceded at least one goal in each of their last 22 Serie A matches, already their longest such streak in a single season in the competition. They've also failed to find the net in seven of their last 11 league matches, a period in which they only managed one victory (2D, 8L).

Hellas Verona have won only one of their last seven matches played in Serie A (3D, 3L), although that victory came last time out against Sassuolo: since February 2022, they've only been able to record consecutive league wins on one previous occasion, doing so in their first two games this term – against Empoli and Roma.

After winning four of their first six Serie A matches played in the Sunday early kick-off (1D, 1L), Lecce haven't managed to win any of the most recent six (3D, 3L).

Empoli have avoided defeat in four of their last six meetings with Milan when facing them for a second time that season in Serie A (1W, 3D), although in the last three they have not scored a single goal.

Since early December, only Inter have collected more points and scored more goals than Milan in Serie A: 40 points and 39 goals for the Nerazzurri in this period, with 30 and 30 for the Rossoneri.

After a run of five consecutive away games without a win in Serie A (3D, 2L), Empoli won the two most recent ones, against Salernitana and Sassuolo; the last time they won three away games in a row in the competition was between December 2015 and January 2016, with Marco Giampaolo on the bench.

Among the teams that finished the first half of this Serie A season in the bottom eight positions, Empoli are the team that have collected the most points in their first eight matches played in the second half (12), just one fewer than their total in the first half of the season (13).

Milan have scored the most goals in the big five European leagues this season from substitute players (13): this is also a record for the Rossoneri in a single Serie A tournament in the three-point-per-win era, while since 1994/95, only Napoli (16 in 2022/23), Fiorentina (17 in 2022/23) and Atalanta (20 in 2019/20 and 21 in 2020/21) have had more in a single campaign.

In case of a victory here, Stefano Pioli would surpass 350 points won as a coach in charge of Milan in Serie A (currently on 348), becoming just the second manager to reach this milestone with the Rossoneri in the three points per win era, after Carlo Ancelotti (557).

M'Baye Niang, who scored eight goals in 67 Serie A matches with AC Milan between 2012 and 2017, has been involved in four goals in his four appearances in the competition with Empoli (three goals and one assist).
